7. Force the student to ask questions. By not asking questions, the student may be demonstrating delusional mastery, fragile understanding, or even lack of interest. _____
 8. At final case presentation and discussion, continued evidence of poor understanding or judgment should be remedied by an assignment to review the literature and write or present a topic which encompasses this case, or write and then verbalize the salient learning points of the case and examination pathway chosen by the student. _____
 9. Query the student about resources, and offer direction to appropriate resources.
 10. Query the student about the case at a future point in time to probe the student's retention and understanding. Was this case similar to any other cases encountered by the student?
 11. In all interactions, encourage the student to commit to answers. _____
